LOVE LETTERS BASIS OF $250,000 SUIT AGAINST WAR HERO

BLUES FOR EX-BLUES WOMAN

Said to Have Received Big Alimony From Local Manufacturer

New York, Aug. 6.—Miss Jeanne Lorraine of No. 116 West 22nd street, said to be the divorced wife of a prominent Boston shoe manufacturer, from whom she received an alimony settlement of $100,000, is in the marital limelight again. This time she asks $250,000 damages in a lawsuit of promise not against Bernard Goldsmith, twenty-six, who recently returned from France, where he served as a sergeant in the Motor Transport Service.

Sergeant Goldsmith is the son of an old money family, who is a member of the firm of Case & Co. The family are wealthy residents of Halls Harbor, L. I., where they have their summer home.

Miss Lorraine's lawyer says she is wealthy in her own right. Sergeant Goldsmith is reported as claiming that his change of heart was due to shell shock, suffered on the battlefields of France.

When Miss Lorraine was advised of his condition, she smiled and said: "Mr. Goldsmith is one of the 110 per cent who will not remain the fact that he was once 250 miles back of the firing line."

"It is quite hard for me to understand how his delicate brain organization could possibly be affected by the explosion of a shell two hundred miles away. But I guess his misfortune is one of the inexplicable happenings of the great war."

NO HILLS OF AFFECTION. Miss Goldsmith showed no signs of his affection upon his return from France, for since then, and up to a very short time ago, he assured me that he had suffered no change of heart as far as our relationship was concerned.

Almost all of the 110 letters that Miss Lorraine says she received from Goldsmith started with "My darling Jeanne" and ended with "Love and kisses from Bernard." Being the abbreviation of Bernard, Miss Lorraine showed none of the jealousy she was said to have.

"I have heard about the wonderful French women here. I know my A. B. C. but now that I know them, I am not so sure I like them. Now, Honey, don't you worry about the French girls taking me away from you."

"In still another he expressed regret for the distance that separated them and said: "I want to come back to you with a clean record, I don't want much more than I care for, but I want you."

A letter written July 15, 1918, says: "Yes, Honey, I am as well as I have ever been. Honey, as far as happiness goes, when so far away from the one you are waiting for, and, Honey, you know I am thinking of you day and night. I received your letter, and I have it framed and standing on a shelf over my bunk, where I can always see it."

FOND MEMORIES RECALLED. Another letter sent the following August 23 has this: "I am certainly glad to hear that you are happy now, as you were. As you know, you were always good looking, and there is no room for improvement. Looking at me now, you know I am not doing much better. Honey, I am sure you are bringing back fond memories. It all happened yesterday."

It just turned out, Honey, my married woman was more like than any of the single ones ever were, so you are a perfect lady."

"BILLY" HAMILTON SELLS $12,000 CLINTON BLOCK Clinton, Aug. 6.—"Billy" Hamilton, noted ball player, today sold his $12,000 Clinton block here to Thomas J. McNamara, who buys for investment. The block contains six acres and is a rapidly growing section of the town.

The "Billy" who left his Clinton home a year or more ago to reside in Worcester is now actively managing a large number of police for the Clinton & Knight Co. in that city.

Lived in-Upton 50 Years Hopkinton, Aug. 6.—A Plummer Taft of Norwell, a resident of Upton a half century, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Marshall Sewell, of a Bright's disease, and sixty-two years of age. He was a native of San Francisco.

CAN THESE GIRLS SWIM? WE'LL SAY SO!

GIRLS' SWIMMING RACE SET FOR AUGUST 30

Who is the best girl swimmer of New England?

The Boston American's ninth annual swimming match will be held in the Charles River basin on Saturday afternoon, August 30.

The race is for the amateur girls' championship of New England and is open to all. There is no entrance fee, and no entry charge for the competitors. All they have to do is enter, then watch the Daily American for instructions.

PRIZE TO SPECTATORS. There will be cup prizes for the winners and medals for all who finish. Girls wishing to enter should write to the Swimming Editor of the American, No. 12 Summer street, Boston, giving age, name and address.

The race is a thrilling spectacle and it doesn't cost a cent to look at it. The course covers one and one-half miles and 200 feet.

What better enjoyment could fathers, mothers, children and grandmothers wish for than to witness this great race, which has the name of the New England Amateur Athletic Association? The beautiful landscape that lines the banks on the Boston side and the Harvard bridge, connecting Boston with Cambridge, form a picturesque picture from which to witness the entire race.

The vintage points will accommodate 100 or more girls starting at the same time in a swimming race for the championship of the New England land states.

Competitors will take the starting start from the Park Commission's float, opposite the Union Boat Club house on the Boston esplanade, proceed up stream to the bridge, turn left, near the Harvard bridge, leave it on the left and return down the river to the starting point. The start will be by pistol shot.

The "safety" of the girls in the water will be a severe thing to be remembered.

GIRLS, ENTER NOW! A word on how to get to the basin to witness the race. People living in the southern part of the city should go to the Boston side of Harvard Bridge. Those living in the northern part of the city can get there by walking along the East Boston Causeway to the junction of Charles and Cambridge streets. From there, the girls may walk to the corner of Charles and Beacon streets, turn down Charles street to River street, and walk through the latter thoroughfare in the Kailashan.

No one on swimming girls, enter your names at once. Don't wait up to the last moment.

THIS IS "TRADERS' DAY" IN ARLINGTON

This is a "traders' day" in Arlington, and in accordance with a custom established some years back the stores and places of business in that town are closed. While in other years the Board of Trade has taken the initiative and arranged for some general day of observance at a central camp, there was no formal observance.

Safe Deposit Hints

When may you just as well keep your securities and valuables at home? Whenever your valuables are in a Safe Deposit Vault NOT of the FIRST CLASS. An advertisement reading "Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe Deposit Vault" does not necessarily make it a vault of the FIRST CLASS. Any safe manufacturer will tell you that even a small vault cannot be built and equipped for less than $50,000, and a large vault in a metropolitan district costs at least twice that sum to construct.

The Commonwealth Trust Company vaults, in all respects, comply with the standard set by experts. Box renters in them have the comfort of knowing they are as safe from loss as human ingenuity and experience can make them.

BAKER ANSWERS PELLETIER'S PROTEST

Says Y.M.C.A. British Pamphlet Was Based on Educational Lecture

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 5.—The Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo today issued a statement in answer to the protest of the Rev. Dr. J. H. Pelletier, of Buffalo, against the publication of a pamphlet by the Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo, entitled "The War in the East," which was distributed to the public last week. The statement says that the pamphlet was based on a lecture given by the Rev. Dr. J. H. Pelletier at the Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo on July 25, 1918, and that the pamphlet was published by the Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo for the purpose of distributing it to the public. The statement also says that the pamphlet was not intended to be a political statement, but rather a statement of the Y.M.C.A.'s position on the war in the East.

When Dr. Pelletier gave the lecture, he said that the Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo was not a political organization, but rather an educational organization. He said that the Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo was not interested in the war in the East, but rather in the education of the youth of the city. He said that the Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo was not interested in the war in the East, but rather in the education of the youth of the city. He said that the Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo was not interested in the war in the East, but rather in the education of the youth of the city.

It appears that the representatives of the Y.M.C.A. of Buffalo are not interested in the war in the East, but rather in the education of the youth of the city. They are not interested in the war in the East, but rather in the education of the youth of the city. They are not interested in the war in the East, but rather in the education of the youth of the city.

FRANCE HONORS B. WHITE. The Rev. Dr. J. H. BOSTON BOYS' DEATH RIDE IN WHITE MOUNTAINS

THE CURVE IN THE TRACK CAUSED THE PLANK TO LEAVE THE TRACK AND THE BOYS WERE HURLED TO DEATH IN THE TRUCK TOWS

Diagram showing how two youthful Boston mountain climbers attempted to speed down Mt. Washington railway on a slide board made from two rail cars, they roped together. At the bend in the track, and while going at terrific speed, they were hurled to instant death. A third boy jumped from the board as the deep descent started and escaped with slight injury.

Boston, N. H., Aug. 6.—The bodies of two boys, Herbert L. Houghton, 17, and Arthur L. Houghton, 15, who were killed last night when they attempted to speed down the Mt. Washington railway on a slide board made from two rail cars, were found this morning. The bodies were found in the truck tows of the railway. The boys were hurled to instant death as the slide board left the track at a sharp curve. A third boy, John J. Houghton, 13, jumped from the board as the descent started and escaped with slight injury.

BOSTON DRIEST FORMER CONVICT PLACE IN ALL NEW ENGLAND HELPS TO TRAP TAX DODGERS

Sheinwald's Greatest MARK-DOWN SALE

I am the Only Shoe Dealer in Boston in a position to sell you brand new merchandise at the "old prices". Some of the best informed shoe men of the country have predicted that shoe prices this season will reach $18 and $20 a pair. At any rate we are bound to see the highest prices in force since the days of the Civil War. As a reflection of this, most shoe "sales" this summer are unlikely to show any of the reductions of former years.

In this extraordinary situation I once more prove to you that Sheinwald is Boston's biggest shoe dealer by throwing

Over $50,000 Worth of High-Grade Footwear in This Big

SHOE SALE

Commencing Tomorrow at 8:30 A. M.

I advise you to buy two or three pairs at these prices and put them away for the future. Buy what you can conveniently afford as I predict that shoe prices must remain high for several years—with a possible scarcity of good shoes. Come as early as you can.

WM. SHEINWALD.

SALE BEGINS TOMORROW MORNING AT 8:30

MAIL ORDERS
We are the original mail order shoe house in Boston. I wish to call the special attention of people in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont to take advantage of these mark-downs of Spring shoes—you will never be able to buy them at these prices again. Send money order. Include parcel post.

CORBETT'S COLUMN

It is strange that those who have the interests of horse racing heart do not attempt to force through a rule to increase the weights that a horse must carry. Such a course would permit the employment of experienced jockeys who now are out of the game because they are too light.

The standard of racing is this country is not high. It is not as high as it should be. It is not as high as it should be. It is not as high as it should be.

SHORTGRASS

Women's skirts getting shorter. If skirts get much shorter they will be useless.

Holland: Kaiser saved tree full of squirrels. Armistice all off.

Chester: Red fans buy pop bottle filled concrete. Taste bad but throw life.

Washington: Congressman has enough liquor last twenty years. Makes will leaving him to take care of it.

Nondulger: Former edifice shows under trainload of army food. Says rather in run over by it than eat it. Healthier.

New York: Women's off-the-face latest war. Leaves room to put more on face.

Berlin: Junkers don't blame Kaiser for last war. Blame him for start of it. Same thing.

SEMI-NOBLES BAR

THIS is the anniversary of the death in 1660 of Diego Velasquez, the Spanish painter, whose works have placed him in the foremost rank of great artists. Chief painter of the Spanish school, he has never been surpassed in the technical qualities of painting, and when his portrait of Juan de Pareja, his slave, was exhibited in Rome, it was said by artists "that all else seemed painting; this alone, truth." In this country are some fine examples of his art. The Metropolitan Museum, the Boston Museum, the Frick, Widener, Gardner and Morgan collections all possess canvases.

If you want oilcloth to look bright and last a long time, never wash them with warm water soapsuds, then dry and polish with a well-buffer and well-polish.

Use water on it. To clean it, rub it with a dannel dipped in turpentine. Then shave half an ounce of beeswax into a cup, and stand it over a fire. Add the turpentine and a saucful of gurgentine, a little shaved Castile soap, and a few drops of oil of citronella. Whip this until it begins to get stiff, and then put it in a pot. A little turpentine and oil of citronella will make it clean and bright.

While sweeping a carpet occasionally dip the broom into a mixture of salt and water. Do not saturate the broom, merely damp it, and the carpet will resume a revived and fresh appearance.

New walking shoes are sometimes inclined to "slip" at the heels, and a blister is the result. A simple preventive is to rub the inside of the shoes with a little soap at the heel before putting them on.

When cleaning combs, never wash them. Clean by brushing and pulling a piece of cotton through the teeth, changing it as it gets soiled, then rub with a clean cloth.

To remove the rusty appearance

To prevent mustard from drying in the mustard-pot, add a little salt when making it.

To clean greasy spots dampened with turpentine, then rub off and wash with weak borax water.

Place the pot over a low flame. Press down the leaves with a spoon or potato masher until the heat begins to draw the juice from the leaves. Enough water clings to the leaves from the washings to keep a meager fire.

Toward the end of the cooking add a teaspoonful each of salt and sugar for each quart of spinach measured before cooking. If much juice collects in the pot, use it as a basis for cream of spinach soup. Try cooking other leafy vegetables when boiled till tender and served with a creamy white sauce or a little melted butter.

Often in city markets, even early in the summer, one can strike a bargain in radishes. Three bunches for a dollar is a bargain. Wash thoroughly. The green tops may be cooked or trimmed and flavored with bits of bacon first. The radishes themselves are delicious.

Scallops cooked are mighty good when boiled and served with just white sauce, to which has been added just a little cheese.

beat down, in a basin of salty water for a couple of hours. This will cause tiny insects otherwise invisible to crawl out of the folds of the leaves. Rinse thoroughly and cut into halves or quarters. Place in a pot and cover with boiling water, remembering what it has cost them to keep body and soul together. They remember the report of New York City's board of health that one child in every five is undernourished. And they are looking at the children of their own families,

This will tend to set the color of the cabbage. Cook uncovered until tender. Cooking onions or cabbage uncovered seems to create less odor than when they are lightly covered.

And don't forget that vegetables properly canned will be just as good, and just as nutritious next winter.

are all the unusual styles that have been introduced at fashionable resorts this Summer. Simple style, easy to slip on, the ones that have really been most popular with the bright girl. The girl who is late in her vacation, or who must change her dress and shoes, and not sacrifice style for convenience. A simple but good looking suit may be made in one evening. Taffeta, satin, crepe de chine, mouliné, and even fur, are all suitable for the suit. Well-killed suit for the average girl is cut in one piece, sleeveless and is fast in one with the front straps are cut in one with the front straps.

A deep hem is turned at the bottom and for decoration one might add a large belt initial. In a gay color, enlivening any of the more serious hues, such as the bright blue taff, which can be purchased at almost any union catalog and ready for use. Our collection of who wear a simple black satin suit of this type embroidered her name in red on the left breast. The hand part of the front, and it was an unusually effective bit of trimming.

To complete the simple suit black tights are worn underneath the skirt and a pair of black leather up, according to the quality. Heavy silk stockings and bright bathing shoes add to the ease

The bathing girl will be interested in a plump suit the upper part of which is made in two parts. The blue taffeta was the favored material for a smart suit made over-fitting bodice lines. The bodice was draped closely to figure and held up by inch shoulder straps. Small corset buttons fastened the bodice in back and there was a short erect skirt set on to hang under the bodice. Two deep creases run in the skirt, but I prefer a skirt that could envelop the form.

Necks are effective when made with stylish low bathing sa-

Cruelty to Our Soldiers by Our Officers

Congressman Dallinger of Massachusetts has won for himself a national recognition by the prompt and effective way that he called public attention to the brutality practiced upon the American soldiers by American officers in France.

Letters from soldiers in Mr. Dallinger's district first stirred him to indignation and put him upon his inquiry. Having satisfied himself that the story of these monstrous cruelties was true, he astonished his fellow-congressmen by the charge that American officers had been guilty of more cruelty toward American soldiers and citizens than had been even alleged against the Germans by British propaganda.

A committee was immediately appointed to investigate the charges, and almost immediately General March, our chief of staff, admitted them. It was found that these prison camps where the cruelties were practiced "were worse than the German prison camps and quite equal to the Siberian prisons."

The officer in charge of the worst camp was a lieutenant called "Hard-Boiled" Smith. He was sentenced to three years for his barbarity, but the commanding general cut the sentence in two, and so far the officers higher up, morally responsible for these outrages upon the Americans by their own officers, have not been punished.

Now comes Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, who more than any other man in the United States Senate understands our military affairs, and introduces a bill providing for the discharge from prison of every soldier, sailor or marine who has been prosecuted, convicted and sentenced by a general, summary or other court-martial.

Senator Chamberlain's proposal does honor to his head and his heart. So many barbarities, inconsistencies and cruel and unusual punishments have been committed by our courts-martial that they have tainted the entire proceedings of these military tribunals. Moreover, in a democracy it will be impossible to carry out a general conscription if the young men of the nation once get it into their heads that by permitting a draft they are depriving themselves of the protection of the law, of equality of treatment, and of justice and are subjecting themselves to the arbitrary whims, tyrannies, hysteria, arrogance and class prejudice of a body of superior officers.

The army life must be made more democratic. The relations between officers and men must be made more democratic. Discipline and obedience to command in the course of military duty is not maintained by arbitrary social distinctions so offensive to the self-respect of the soldiers, such as forbid an officer to attend the dance attended by an enlisted man even though the dance is given by his school class and the enlisted men are his classmates. There is a difference between the familiarity that breeds contempt and the level courtesy consistent with the self-respect of both officers and men, and which raises no invidious distinctions.

General Von Bernhardi, the distinguished German officer, in his famous work in which he discussed the relative strength of the European armies two years before the war, conceded several points of superiority of the French army over the German army and claimed no superiority for the German army over the French army except in the control by the German officers over the enlisted men. He contended that the comradery, as he called it, which French republicans maintained between officers and men would make their control of their men in battle less perfect than the control which the German officers exercised. Of course, the war showed that this was not true. Both in victory and defeat the French soldiers yielded to their officers all the obedience that was required.

If we are to have safety we must have universal military training. But we cannot have universal military training if our young men will not consent to it, and they will not consent to it if they must under it submit to the kind of military discipline they had too often experienced during the war.

Mr. Colver of the Federal Trade Commission

The selection of Mr. Colver of the Federal Trade Commission as a member of the President's commission to inquire into the cost of living and the wage scale of the railroad employees gives assurance, so far as Mr. Colver's voice and vote has influence, that this commission will do its work intelligently and courageously.

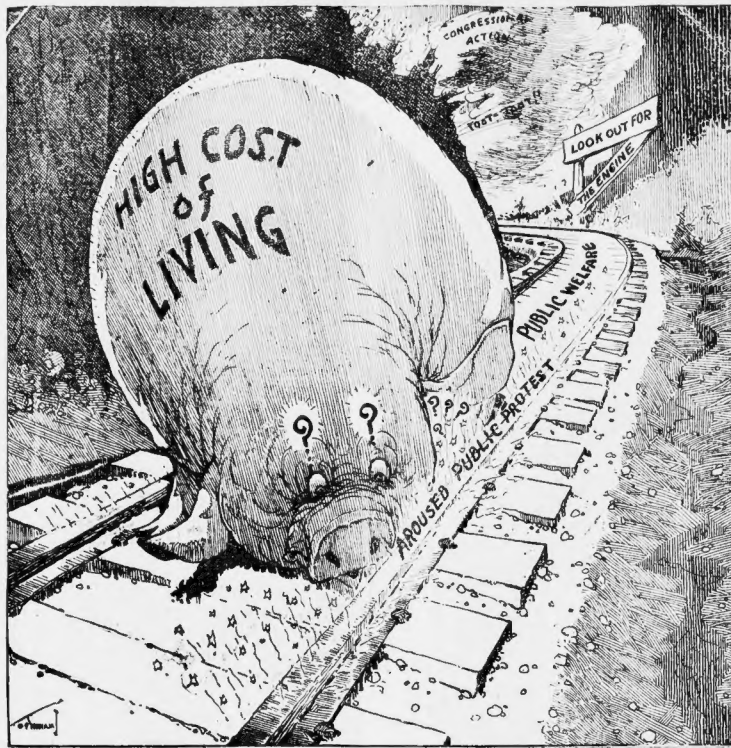

No public servant has come out of the war with a better reputation for courage and thoroughness than Mr. Colver. He had the courage of David facing Goliath when he opposed some of the most powerful industrial interests of the country. Few men have had the hardihood in public office to attack in their lair the beef packers and to continue to worry them until the country was aroused to the danger which the increasing cost of living was creating in America.

With the able assistance of Francis Hemeny, who, as prosecuting attorney in San Francisco, conducted the famous investigation and trial of the public service corporation grafters on the coast, Mr. Colver and the Trade Commission probed the transaction of the great packers and revealed what the Trade Commission declared to be an attempt to monopolize all the sources of the food supply in the country. The packers, of course, have been made furious by Mr. Colver's attacks. They are a dangerous crowd to have camping on a public servant's trail. Mr. Colver understands this as well as anybody. Therein is the evidence of his courage. He not only exhibited ordinary courage by incurring the wrath of these powerful interests, but he exhibited what Napoleon called "22 a clock in the morning" courage, the highest of all intrepidity, because he and his colleagues fought almost alone with much apparent indifference and very little expression of sympathy from the public.

It is really extraordinary to observe how little support the Federal Trade Commission received from the newspapers supposed to represent the public when this investigation was being made. That is the great weakness of democracy, the uncertainty with which fidelity and sacrifice for the public interest is recognized and rewarded and the certainty with which that fidelity to the public interests will be recognized and punished by the anti-social, special interests which the loyal public servant attacks.

We would have more Colvers if the public in general were quicker to recognize them when they appeared and more constant in their support of them when they are attacked.

DO NOT SPECULATE!
COMMON stock shares of $10 par value—offered by us at $2.25 per share—of the Oil Company seem to us to afford an extraordinary speculative opportunity. In our judgment, these shares possess possibilities of profit in very large amount. We recommend these shares. The Oil Company is going on its third year. A big company and a prosperous one should be made of it. We will be glad to receive your order and remittance for such number of shares as you wish to purchase.

DEAR SIR:

YOUR CIRCULAR came.

AS PRINTED above.

IN THIS morning's mail.

AND I want to thank you.

FOR THE opportunity.

YOU OFFER to me.

TO ENRICH myself.

BUT I am white ago.

I MADE up my mind.

THAT WITH one more sucker.

BEING BORN every minute.

THEY DON'T need me.

AND EVER since then.

I HAVE had fairly good sense.

BUT I have a proposal.

I'D LIKE to make.

AND IT is this.

IN AN old suit case.

IN AN old warehouse.

I HAVE some shares.

OF OIL well stock.

THAT I acquired.

AWAY OUT in the West.

DURING OIL well booms.

THAT USE to come.

EVERY LITTLE while.

AND ONE of the shares.

IF MY memory serves.

IS A three-color share.

WITH A beautiful bird.

WITH CRIMSON wings.

THAT STRUT right out.

TILL THEY almost touch.

THE ARTISTIC border.

THE PRINTER put on.

WHEN HE printed the sheet.

IT'S DONE in a tint.

AND IS really grand.

AND ANOTHER share.

HAS A great bear head.

EMBOSSED in gold.

AND THE border is gold.

AND SOME of the lettering.

IS PRINTED in gold.

AND NEXT to the one.

WITH THE crimson bird.

IT'S FINEST I have.

AND ANOTHER one.

WHICH I think comes third.

WAS ORIGINALLY meant.

FOR A fishing concern.

AND IT has a fish.

I THINK it's a perch.

RIGHT across the front.

AND WHAT I propose.

IS AN even trade.

OF ONE of these shares.

FOR ONE of yours.

BUT I'D much prefer.

YOU WOULD leave me the fish.

BECAUSE IT never fails.

TO HAND me a laugh.

I THANK you.

BORN IN 'EM

Reports from thirty out of our forty-eight States give Connecticut the biggest cash balance at the end of its fiscal year. The State's excess of revenue over expenditure was $2,819,714. States showing a deficit include New York, Massachusetts and California. But the descendants of Connecticut settlers, who were reputed to have made wooden nutmegs and sold them as the real thing to unsuspecting folk from out the State, evidently inherited financial ability.

THERE IS HOPE

Without wishing to start any feverish activity in this State, one cannot help noting, nevertheless, that a Pennsylvania hunter dug into a woodchuck hole and came up with six quarts of whiskey which someone had "cached" there.

WORKING IN A WHOLE-HEARTED WAY

If you are not fully interested in the advancement of the firm where you are employed, your room is worth more than your services to that firm. Besides, you are stunting your own growth. Better resign.

The more interested you are in results, the faster you will go after them. In other words, you work better and faster when you are interested, so why waste time all around in working where the reverse is true?

Before you are sought by another firm you must have earned a reputation as valuable in some capacity to the company where you are affiliated.

Your value to others corresponds largely to the value attached to you by your present employers.

If you are an expert—even unusually good—it is bound to become known.

Even if your employers, for certain reasons, have failed to acknowledge your worth to the organization, there are some who do talk, often without knowing or having the least idea of giving you a boost.

The higher you bring your service to your employers, greater your value to some other firm.

Letters to the Editor

The French Treaty

Editor Boston American: It seems that the American people are being misled by incorrect statements, to the effect that we will not be bound by the peace treaty or the French treaty to go to war unless Congress shall declare war. The reason given is that under our Constitution only Congress can declare war. According to international and constitutional law, it is, as between the parties to a treaty, entirely immaterial whether or not a nation making a treaty violated its constitution. Constitutionality of a treaty is only an internal affair of each particular nation.

The American people would be obligated by a treaty requiring war for its performance, even though Congress refused to make the appropriations necessary for the war. If a resolution for declaring war was introduced in Congress, and Congress refused to pass it, we would still, under the treaty, remain obligated to go to war. Not having, at this writing, looked at hand, I cannot cite the authorities. A nation is bound to perform a treaty even though its Legislature refuses to take measures absolutely required by the constitution of that nation. That is, as I recollect, what we did France in a case in which she said she could not perform a treaty with this nation because her Chamber of Deputies refused to make an appropriation called for by the treaty, and the King could not compel the Chamber. As to interpretation of the treaty, either nation has as much as a little right to the other.

It would seem, therefore, that the treaty with France, as it commits us to war, violates our Constitution, in that Congress has not approved. The fact that the war is a future one against undesignated nations is indifferent, save that it enhances the value of the thing. C.S.B.

INTRICACIES OF DISTANCE PUZZLE SCIENCE

By Garrett P. Serviss

THE ray of light that reaches our eye from a star is contained the picture of that star as it was at the moment the light left it. If we had the means of unfolding the picture carried in the ray the whole star would be before us in all its details. Picture follows picture in endless succession as the light waves pour into the eye, and thus the story of the star's life flows by us like a panorama.

It is the same with the light pictured story of the earth. As it develops it flies on and on through immensity and out among the stars, and the panorama is unfolded from the surface of the globe to the front wave of the first light which left it uncounted millions of years ago. This thought, first developed by an astronomer, author many years ago, becomes more and more interesting as science and philosophy plunge us deeper into the mysteries of time and space.

Estimated by Miles

Light travels about 3,600,000,000 miles in a year. Call it 6,000,000,000 for the sake of easy numbers. Now, if only we could fix the length of time that has elapsed since the earth's birth, we should know how far away it would be necessary to place ourselves in order to have first-hand knowledge of the very light-waves that left the earth at its birth.

The nebular hypothesis assumes that the first form of the earth, as an independent body, was that of a nebulous ring, surrounding the vast condensing mass that was to become the sun.

While we do not know how long it was since the earth was a nebulous ring, we can make a fairly good guess as to the least possible time that must have elapsed since then, and we may put this at one, one-hundred-million years. Then, at a distance out in space of thousands of millions of millions of miles, we should encounter the waves of light that carry a vision of the earth in the shape of a luminous ring just breaking off from the periphery of the immense solar nebula.

Starting from that point, and speeding onward with the velocity of the gravitational impulse, which may be a hundred thousand, or a million, times the velocity of light, we should see the subsequent history of the earth unfolded by the endless chain of the light-waves, every step in that history being represented in the unfolding panorama that expands forever across the ocean of infinity, where it can never find a shore or a stopping point. But, owing to our great speed of approach, we should crowd into a short space the whole story of hundreds of millions of years. We should be riding back through the light-wave from front to rear. It would be like running to the front of history's procession to see it pass a second time.

We should find time cancelled by distance; a century of time eliminated by every 600 trillions of miles. Here on the earth, at this moment, our date is 1919 years. After the beginning of the Christian era; if we could leap in an instant to a distance of 11,544,000,000 miles from the earth, we should find ourselves surrounded by the light-waves that shone upon the child Christ in ancient Palestine.

Labor's Great Power
It Rules the World Now
Wisdom Will Recognize It
Public Ownership Coming
—By Arthur Brisbane—

The people should have kept and read their own railroad. They hadn't the energy, or their Government wouldn't let them.

Now millions of men that work on the railroads announce that they intend to put through government ownership, keeping for themselves a share in the profits and in the management. It looks as though they might do it. The power of labor organization and numbers may prove strong enough to compel government ownership and defeat organized finance.

Stocks drop five and ten points at a time and there is a loud outcry at the suggestion that millions of men working the railroads should have something to say about them.

Property is horrified at demands for increased pay aggregating eight hundred million dollars a year. The government lately has been spending more than eight hundred million dollars a year to rebuild and re-equip the bankrupt railroads and pay to the owners dividends not earned. Wall Street and private owners see nothing shocking in treating the public to give money to men who sit and draw dividends. The stock comes when you expect paying well the men that do the actual railroad work.

Senator Cummins is sincerely and intelligently indignant by the railroad men's demand that the route be owned by the people, created by the government and the workers. Mr. Cummins sees in the railroad workers' "the purpose to obliterate the relation of employer and employee." He said he doubted if civilization could survive the termination of this relation.

It may comfort Senator Cummins to recall that some very good men doubt if civilization could survive the termination of slavery. Even Aristotle, one of the five greatest intellects, declared slavery essential to civilization. He was wrong. The wage system took the place of slavery successfully, thanks to improved machinery.

And, although it is not apt to come suddenly, and Mr. Cummins probably won't see it, something even better than slavery, as it may be found in universal free sharing, public ownership and other improvements.

Powerful men fought to maintain slavery, believing that without it they could not be rich and comfortable. They were mistaken. The slave must have what he wants under every system. But after a while he will learn not to want to many things that he doesn't need.

If we are to have safety we must have universal military training. But we cannot have universal military training if our young men will not consent to it, and they will not consent to it if they must under it submit to the kind of military discipline they had too often experienced during the war.

If Wall Street men who knock down prices in their terror were wise they would realize that nothing could help them more, than general settlement of current questions as suggested by the railroad workers' plan that would insure contentment to millions.

The New York Times, speaking in dull measured tones for private ownership, and all things remaining as they are, finds a great obstacle to public ownership of railroads in the question of financing.

The railroads are worth many billions. Government could not raise all that money to buy and take over the roads, says the Times. The government could not possibly improve the roads for only in deadly peril of war could Government bonds be sold as they were sold recently.

Besides, says the Times, government had had to pay for money on the loan last. If an attempt were made to borrow money to buy the railroads, the government would have to go to Wall Street and ask for interest that Wall Street might ask.

Thus the Times worries about the poor government. But it is becoming more and more evident that the government would first find out what the roads are really worth, what has been spent on them in good faith. It would pay that out and not interest that it could not go out and borrow the money at 10 per cent. It could pay to the private owners. It could give a 4 per cent. government bond for the railroads. You will see how the Times is a good thing, if they do not do what the laborers want.

The railroad owners, if wise, would take the three-quarters of the railroads that are being used as a present labor and price condition.
